INTRODUCTION

§ 1. Introductory Remarks.

THE poem here printed I copied years ago with a view to publication, and had prepared the grammar and the greater part of the introduction, but an edition by W. Heuser which appeared in the Bonner Beiträge zur Anglistik (ed. by Trautmann), Heft xvii (1905), caused me to lay the work aside. As, however, the poem is an interesting one, and as the Bonner Beiträge are not very accessible, I have decided to go on with my edition.

I wish to express my most grateful thanks to my friend Miss E. M. Overend (Mrs. Lorimer) for her invaluable help in the preparation of the glossary.

§ 2. Signs and abbreviations used.

In the glossary, phonology, and accidence .. means that this particular form occurs in other instances besides those given, whilst 'etc.' in the phonology and accidence indicates that other (i. e. different) words afford further examples of the same sound or inflexion.

ou in the glossary and accidence indicates that the combination has the sound of ū, not that of the diphthong.

ô denotes the ũ sound.

g denotes the dzh sound.

Vowel length is marked in the accidence and glossary but not in the phonology.

WG. = West Germanic.

Bülbring = Bülbring, Altenglisches Elementarbuch.

ESt. = Englische Studien.

Morsbach = Morsbach, Mittelenglische Grammatik.

NED. = New English Dictionary (The Oxford English Dictionary).

PBB. = Paul und Braunes Beiträge.

§ 3. MS.

The unique text of Jacob and Josep is contained in MS. Bodley 652 (Summary Catalogue No. 2306). The MS. consists of three parts written by different hands in the second half of the thirteenth century in England.

(A) foll. 1-10^b. Jacob and Josep. The date of the hand-writing of this part seems to be soon after the middle of the thirteenth century. Sir George Warner, to whom I sent a photograph of the MS., confirms this opinion. Between foll. 6 and 7 a leaf has been cut out.

The two other parts bound up with J. J. are in French :

(B) fol. 11. A French translation of the Elucidarium of Augustodunensis, and (fol. 46^b) a letter in French from Prester John to Frederic Barbarossa.

(C) fol. 52. The French poem Chateau d'Amour by Bp. Grosseteste.

§ 4. Contents.

Jacob sits in his hall and sees his sons come home from the field. Josep begs his father to be allowed to tell him a dream he has had. Jacob bids him do so, and Josep tells how he dreamt that when they were binding the sheaves, the sheaves of the others all bowed down to his, and how the sun, moon, and eleven stars fell at his feet. Jacob thinks that the dream will certainly come true, but his brethren hearing it, hate Josep as their 'full foe'. The brethren went afield to look after the cattle, and Josep remained at home. His father sends him to seek his brethren and bring him tidings as to how they fare. He goes, but cannot find them. A man meets him wandering all alone and tells him to go to Dotaym. When he comes there, his brethren say, 'Here comes the dreamer, let us kill the scoundrel.' They seize him, intending to kill him, but Ruben interposes, so they strip him of his kirtle and put him into an empty pit. Ruben goes away, he cannot stay for pity. The others remain and commence their meal; no scruples trouble them; they laugh and consider it a great joke, and are thinking of drawing him out of the pit again and killing him, when they see two rich chapmen from Galaad coming. After some bargaining they sell Josep to them.

The merchants take him to Egypt and lead him into the city, 'which was rich and strong: castles high and proud, streets wide and long, many a fair hall and many a fair bower, white as any lily, bright as any flower.' Knights and citizens bold, ladies from their bowers and maidens free came into the street to see him, and it seemed to them as though an angel had come from heaven. The tidings soon reached Putifar, and he came and bought Josep, paying 'more than they asked'.

Jacob meanwhile is sitting in the hall, and sees his sons come home with Josep's kirtle all bloody. He falls down in a swoon and tears his hoary locks; Josep's mother rends her face and her smock.

Putifar clothes Josep in fine garments and gives him to Pharaon, whose wife soon falls in love with him. One day when the King has gone to the wood to shoot with his 'bow ibent', she sends for him and asks him for his love. On his refusal, she begins to cry out, and the King presently returning, Josep is cast into prison. Here he interprets the dreams of the King's butler and baker. Then comes Pharaon's dream of the seven fat and lean kine (but not of the seven ears); and the butler, remembering Josep, tells Pharaon. Josep, 'pale and lean,' is fetched and interprets the dream, adding, 'This is thy dream, Sir King, think thou thereon. Unless Christ be thy help, Egypt is lost.' The King ponders over it by day and by night, and does not know what to do: no one could advise him. 'Then spoke an old man who was wise of speech.'

[Here a leaf is missing.]

'When I think of Abraham,' proceeds the poet, 'and the shame he suffered in Egypt on account of his wife, and how he was finally driven out of the land—if a righteous man like that suffered such shame, it seems to me no game to send to Egypt.' The brethren often brought home 'this small chaff' and made much moan for want of food. Jacob therefore sent his sons—all except Benjamin—to Egypt to buy corn. Much was the bliss they saw there. A minstrel overtook them with a harp on his back. 'Whence come you, young men?' he said, 'It seems by your asses that you wish to buy corn. I will take you to the drawbridge and the noblest of men will entertain you to-night.' He brought them to the castle and got the porter to let them in. In the hall they see Josep and fall on their knees. Questioned they tell him that they have come from Jerusalem to buy corn, and give him the names of their father and mother. Josep feasts them and has their asses loaded with wheat, and into one of the sacks he himself puts a golden cup. Early next morning they start, but ere long twelve young men, with helmet, coat of mail, and drawn sword, overtake them and lead them back to Josep, when the cup is at once found. Josep, however, merely looks at them, and shakes his head saying,

‘Cursed be treachery and he who first invented it, so many a guiltless man it brings to the ground!’

Then, learning that they have another brother at home, he sends them back again under a solemn promise to return with Benjamin. Jacob laments and falls into a swoon when he hears the news, but says they must not break their word, and he allows Benjamin to go. On their arrival Josep is overjoyed and goes to his chamber to weep for joy. He thanks the Lord that the eleven stars have come to him; if he only had his father and mother, he would have the sun and the moon as well. After the feast Josep reveals himself to his brethren and again goes to his chamber to weep for joy. Then said Ruben, ‘Did I not tell you that you did wrong in sinning against the child? Now we are all done for.’ Josep however, returning, kisses them all, says that his dream is not yet fulfilled, and sends them to fetch his father and kindred. Jacob, on hearing that Josep is alive, casts away his crutch, takes his mantle, plaits his hair with a silken string, takes his hat, and exclaiming that now, freed from his sorrow, he feels as though he could fly like an eagle, he rides forth singing like a child. Pharaon gives Jacob castles high and wide, and rich land by the seaside. All are happy.

It will be noted that the story as here told differs from that of the Bible in several respects.

(i) Potiphar buys Joseph and gives him to Pharaoh, and it is Pharaoh’s wife, not Potiphar’s, who falls in love with him.

(ii) In the Bible the brethren get the corn and, Simeon being left as a hostage, return home to fetch Benjamin. They arrive a second time and it is on this second occasion that a cup is put into the sack. It is Benjamin’s sack, and Joseph says he will keep him as his servant, but will allow the others to return in peace.

In J. J. the brethren arrive in Egypt, get the corn, and it is on this first occasion that the cup is put into one of the sacks when Benjamin is not yet there. On the second occasion, when Benjamin is there, there is no mention of a cup or sack.

(iii) When the brethren brought Jacob news that Joseph was alive, he was evidently ill, for he threw away his crutch and felt able to fly like an eagle. He rode forth singing like a child.

If we compare the narrative of J. J. with the history of Jacob and Joseph as told in the Cursor Mundi (= C. M.), we find certain points of resemblance. In the case of variants (ii) and (iii) the two poems agree, the cup being put into the sack on the brethren's first visit to Egypt; and when they arrive back from their second visit, they find their father ill in bed and unable to get up and walk; but when he learns that Joseph is alive, he calls for his clothes, leaps up, and cries like a young man to his sons to make haste.

In the case of (i) the transference of the lovemaking from Potiphar's wife to Pharaoh's does not occur in C. M., which here agrees with the biblical narrative, and not with J. J.

(iv) There is another point, a non-biblical story which I believe to have been told on the lost leaf (between fol. 6^b and 7), and which we find in full in the Cursor Mundi, ll. 4749-4792. There we learn that after Joseph had had the corn thrashed, the chaff was thrown into the Nile and was carried down the river. Jacob happened to be walking by the Nile and saw the chaff floating down. He called his sons and bade them go up the stream, as they would be sure to find corn where the chaff came from. So the brethren went to Egypt.

From l. 330 of J. J. (Ofte of his smal chaf þis breþren brouzten hom) it is evident that the chaff story was known to the author of J. J. and was probably told on the lost leaf.

In the Old French verse translations of the Bible we find similar variants from the biblical story. In La Bible des sept états du monde by Geufroi de Paris we find variants (i) Pharaoh's wife, and (iv) the chaff story.¹ Also in Herman de Valenciennes² we find variants (i) and (iv).

In Jehan Malkaraume³ and in the *Traduction anonyme de la Bible entière*⁴ we find variant (i) Pharaoh's wife. No. (iv), the chaff story, is also to be found in an old French fragment in MS. Harley 3775, extracts from which were published by P. Meyer in Romania 36, 188 ff. Whether variants (ii) and (iii) are contained in any of these I do not know.

It is worth noting that even single lines in J. J. and C. M. agree closely in their contents:

(i) J. J. 304:

Forþ me feccheþ Iosep, þat bloc was 7 lene.

C. M. 4547:

For lene he was, and wan þe face.

(ii) J. J. 351:

'Berewe þou from care oure Louerd, þat wel mai.'

Feire fareþ þis þunge men bi dai 7 bi niȝt

Into Egipte lond þat hi comen riȝt.

C. M. 4804:

'Godd hald ouer yow his holy hand.'

þai heied þam fast on þair wai, þat vntil Egipte son com þai.

² Cp. Bonnard, Les Traductions de la Bible en vers français au moyen âge, p. 15.

³ Cp. Bonnard, p. 59.

⁴ Ibid., p. 87.

(iii) J. J. 410:

‘Abideþ,’ hi seiden, ‘þeues, abideþ, 3^e lep inome.’

C. M. 4901:

‘Theues,’ said þai, ‘ye most abide.’

§ 5. Phonology.

A. VOWELS.

(1) West Germanic ǣ before nasals.

(a) Before final n and n + cons. (except in the case of lengthening groups) it generally appears as a: wan 26, 27; bigan 34; gan 172 ...; man 62 ...; dranc 445; anhonge(d) 266, 414, etc. (37 instances). Far less frequently is it written *o*¹: only the following instances occur, onswerede 79; wondrinde 76; chapmon 164; þonke(þ) 245, 306, 475. It should be noted however that, though man is, with the exception of l. 164, always written with a, in all the six instances where it occurs in the rhyme (31, 132, 164, 169, 335, 492) it rhymes with ȝ from OE. ǣ, so that the a is possibly due to the scribe.

(b) Before final m it appears as a in the preterites cam 87, 91 ...; and nam 273, 399, 401. In the preposition from 32 ... it is always written o.

(c) Before m and n in open syllables both a and o occur indifferently, though the a forms slightly predominate: grame 3, grome 233; name 4, nome 383; ssame 326, ssome 229 ...; wone (OE. wana) 317, 331; mani 147 ... (eight times, always with a); etc.

(d) Before the lengthening groups mb, nd, ng, it appears as o: wombe 7; londe 23 ...; song 5 ...; etc. (over 70 instances). Only in one case is a written: wrang 132.

(2) OE. æ. This regularly yields a: after 2 ...; nas 19 ...; fader 35 ...; etc. An isolated exception is heuede (OE. hæfde) 240.

(3) OE. ea. Before l + cons. (other than d) it regularly becomes a: halle 31 ...; alle 32 ...; falle 46 ...; etc. Before ld it yields ȳ: tolde 35 ...; bolde 151, 291; biholde 152 ...; olde 252 ...; etc. The only exceptions are elde 31, 169, 335 (see note). Before r + cons. (other than n) it appears as a: art 204; armes 222; harpe 251 ...; etc. Before the lengthening group rn it becomes ē: erne (OE. carnian) 342; ern (OE. earn) 519; bern (OE. bearn) 520.

(4) OE. eo becomes e: here 14 ...; heuene 72 ...; etc. Before rn it is lengthened to ē: jerne 36. An isolated exception is urles (OE. corlas) 291, where the u presumably = ü.

(5) Early WS. ie, LWS. y, Angl. e, æ (umlaut of ea) appears as ē in derne 214; werne 215. It is represented by a in awaried 427; halde (EWS. hieldan, Angl. hældan) 391.

(6) ME. u. This is written u (v) and o, and the scribe is very regular in his spelling. Initially he writes v in both open and close syllables: vnirude 20; vpriȝt 44; vs 71 ...; vnder- 84 ...; vpon 140; etc. Medially he writes o in open syllables and u in close syllables (except after w, when he uses o). Instances are (a) in open syllables: bote 4 ...; loueden 5 ...; comen 8 ...; sones 26 ...; inome 93 ...; frome 94 ...; etc. But *trukede*¹ 393, 480 and also regularly ssule(n), 56, 186 ... (b) In close syllables: ful 8 ...; bus 13 ...; zunge 34 ...; sunne 48, 478; burȝ 145, 149; hunger 316 ...; etc. But after w we find o: wolle 1 ...; worpen 102 ...; worȝ 120 ...; wonder 155 ...; iwonne 477; etc. Note that gonn(en) where we should expect u, is regularly spelt with o: 46, 60, 261, 286.

(7) (a) OE. y (umlaut of u). The predominant representative is u (= ü): gurdel 7; fullen 11; fulde(n) 14, 260; hul 19; dude 24 ...; kurtel 99 ...; etc. (thirty-seven instances). On tu- (= tü-) from OE. tyge, cp. (12). Both i and e also occur, but much less frequently: pinkeþ 108; kinne 181; sinne 182; kisse 216 ...; etc. (eleven instances). Instances of e are meri 5; knetten 43; evel 73; pet 95 ... (pet occurs eight times and is always so spelt); begge 130, 362 (in all thirteen instances). Of the foregoing examples the following occur in the rhymes:

(a) knetten (OE. cnyttan): setten (OE. settan) 43-4.

(b) kisse (OE. cyssan): iwisse (OE. gewisse) 216-17; blisse (OE. bliss): kisse 388-9 and 473-4.

(c) dude (OE. dyde): stede (OE. stede) 242-3; arugge (OE. on hrycge): sigge (OE. secgan) 360-1; begge (OE. bycgan): -brugge (OE. brycge) 362-3; kinne (OE. cynne): sinne (OE. synne) 181-2; winne (OE. wynne): kunne (OE. cynne) 531-2.

As the u (= ü) forms predominate so largely there seems little reason for doubting that they represent the pronunciation of the author, and that the rhyme words in group (c) originally all had u: dude: stude (OE. styde, cp. Sievers, PBB. x. 197, and xvi. 235); arugge: sugge (cp. Morsbach, § 109, n. 4 and § 133, n. 2); bugge: -brugge; kunne: sunne; wunne: kunne. The use of e and i in groups (a) and (b) is no doubt owing to rhyme need.

(β) OE. y from other sources also appears as u (= ü): nuste 197; sullen (OE. syllan, cp. Bülbring, § 304) 116, 118, 150, 379. For the umlaut of ea cp. (5). Muche(l) 20, 110 ... and such 12, 328, 371 ... are always written with u, but the pronunciation may have been u, not ü.

(8) OE. ā becomes ȃ: one 2, 4 ...; gon 6; loþ 9; hom 32 ...; wo 59 ...; etc. There are no instances of a.

(9) OE. ēo appears as ē: lef 9, 130 ...; fēllen 48, 50; te (OE. tēon) 77; etc. In three instances it is written u (probably = ū): bihuld 161; vnfuld 162; athuld 223. The personal pronoun, OE. hēo, is always written heo: 196, 216 ... OE. ēow, ēower appears as ȝou 3 ...; ou 22, 345; ȝoure 45 ...

(10) Early WS. īe, Non-WS. ē (umlaut of ēa) appears as ē: ihere 1 ...; leue 37; isemed 114 ...; reme 224, 231; etc. Isolated exceptions with u (probably = ū) are ucchen (OE. īecan) 7; struþten 101. Corresponding to OWS. gīet 'yet' (where the īe is of uncertain origin) we have ȝut 56, otherwise ȝit.

(11) OE. ū is regularly written ou, except when followed by ht; nou 1, 6 ...; out 7 ...; oure 11, 13 ...; þou 42 ...; louten 46; etc.; but þuȝte (OE. þūhte) is always written with u: 41, 45, 47 ... The only other exceptions are¹: hu 71; ure 72, 384; þu 82, 83, 84, 212; rum 99; bachuse 259. Note that ME. ū lengthened from OE. ū before nd is, in the few cases where it occurs, always written u: (i)funde(n) 359, 421, 427; grunde 428. Possibly lengthening had not in this case taken place.

(12) OE. ȳ (umlaut of ū). This appears regularly as u (= ū). The instances are: rume 7; luþer 10, 180; lutel 11, 81, 405; vnirude 20; ssrudeþ 187; ssrūdde 501; prute 215; prude 313, 508; lute 273. The only exceptions are kin 288, 289; kyn 287; kuin 284. In the last instance the scribe seems to have intended to write kun and to have then changed his mind and to have forgotten to underdot the u. This seems to be more likely than that the ui is here an isolated spelling denoting ū. In tubrugge 363 the first u (= ū) has arisen from OE. *y*g (OE. tygebrycg*).

(13) Note the influence of the w in twolf 407, 532; wöder 77; forswolewed 288; wölle 1 ...

B. CONSONANTS.

(1) Initial f is generally written f, but in four instances the Southern v occurs: vader 39; vrom 113; vallēp 375; vingres 391.

(2) OE. sc is regularly written ss: sseues 43, 45; ... ssulen 56; ... ssroud 187; Of fiss 7 of flesse 503; etc.

(3) Final n is dropped before a consonant in el(l)eue 50, 476 (besides elleuene 471); owe 195; seuc 284 ...; o 94, 103.

(4) After t an initial p becomes t: tis 20; tou 38; te 48; etc.

(5) Initial wh has become w: wat 54 ...; wer 70 ...; wen 270 ...; wite 391; etc. wh is less common: while 5; etc.

§ 8. Endings of verbs.

Infinitive.

(i) At the end of the line the final n is regularly dropped, the only exceptions being the monosyllabic forms bēn, gēn, isēn (six instances) by the side of bē, gē, isē, lē (eight instances).

(ii) In the caesura it is regularly dropped before a following consonant, but before a vowel or h it is sometimes retained (eight instances), sometimes dropped (eight instances).

(iii) In other positions it is regularly retained before vowels, the only exceptions being cluppe 7 216; to sēch vs 341. Before consonants it is regularly dropped (thirty-six instances); the n forms only occur eight times: gōn 6; cōmen 58; etc.

The i of the second class of weak verbs is found in the following cases: hātīc 60, lōuīc, 214, gīstni 365, gladien 434, þōlie 443. Cp. pres. indic. plur. lōuīep 190.

Pres. Indic. 3rd Pers. Sg.

The regular ending is -ep (-þ), fifty-seven instances. The syncopated sit occurs 31, 65, 67 ...; bihalt 33; ilast 460.

Present Indic. -Pl.

Ends regularly in -ep (-þ), sixty-nine instances. The only exception is cōme 118.¹ When followed by the personal pronoun the þ is, as usual, dropped: wōlle 3e 1; etc.

Present Partic.

Ends in -inde: wondrinde 76; blōwīnde 230; singinde 521.

Pret. Indic. Pl.

Forms with final n largely predominate, the n being retained before consonants as well as before vowels. There are sixty-one instances of n forms, and only eleven without n.

Past Participle.

The strong past partic. regularly drops the n in the caesura and at the end of the lines, the only exception being the verb (a)gōn, which has forms both with and without n: e.g. īgē: þē 103, but īgōn: anōn, 297. In other positions n forms are used before vowels and h, and forms without n before consonants. The only exception is icōmen bēþ 476.

Both strong and weak participles have the prefix i-, except of course compound verbs: idō 62; icōme 66; isēmed 114; itōld 133; etc.

§ 9. Substantives.

(i) a-stems. Masculine and neuter.

Dative Sg. The dative sg. has an inflexional e, which however can be dropped. At the end of the line e is regularly written when required for the rhyme, e. g. flōde (dat. sg.): gōde (acc. pl.) 2; telle (inf.): spelle (dat. sg.) 40; etc. It is regularly dropped when the rhyme word has no finale: chin: in 101; mōd (dat. sg.): gōd (nom. sg.) 107; ssrōud (dat. sg.): prōud (nom. sg.) 187; etc. In the caesura it is generally written: drinke 14; lōnde 23, 25; etc.; but in a number of cases it is dropped, and in most of these the line is best scanned as a septenary, in which the first half line normally ends in an accented syllable; cp. Nas néuere quéne ín þis lōnd 229; cp. also lōnd 119; dai 265; etc. In other parts of the verse it is dropped before vowels and unemphatic h: e. g. dich 18; lōnd 113; etc. But cp. drinken 317, where an n has been added. Before consonants it is not unfrequently dropped, and not always for metrical reasons, e. g. wīn 257 (fúl of wīn clér). Disyllabic nouns do not take the final e, e. g. hunger 343; water 355; lōuerd 435; seluer 507; etc. Compounds such as wīn3arde 256 are treated as monosyllabic. The OE. neut. swefn appears not only in the dat. as sweuene, but also in the nom. acc. as sweuene 51 ..., swefne 35 ..., besides sweuen 120 ...

The neuter substantives either form their plural like the masc. in -es, as in wōrdes 1; etc.; or, as in OE., without inflexion, as in ǵēr 314, 499; kȳn 287 ... In wēpnēn 350 we have a weak pl.

A dat. pl. in e occurs in daſwe 13; lifdaſwe 24, 309.

(ii) ō-stems. Feminine.

The nom., dat., acc. sg. ends in e: blisse 354; etc. The plur. ends in -es: strēles 146; pīnes 337.

Verbal nouns in ing form the nom., dat., acc. sg. either with or without the -e: tīdinge (nom.) 537, (acc.) 206; tīding (nom.) 157, (acc.) 71; blissinge (acc.) 444; mēting (nom.) 90.

The dat. world occurs l. 19.

(iii) i-stems. Masculine.

The gen. pl. we have in Egipte 116, 119 ... beside Egiptene 143.

(iv) u-stems. Masculine and Feminine.

The masc. u-stems have gone over to the a declension, except that sōne has the -e in the nom. acc. as well as in the dat. Pl. sōnes 26 ...

The fem. u-stem hōnd occurs in the dat. sg. hōnd 141, acc. sg. hōnd 133. The pl. is hōnden 132, 335 ... In ll. 109, 185 the pl. hōnde occurs in the rhyme.

(v) r-stems.

fader forms its dat. without e, e. g. 35 ... The gen. sg. fader occurs 67, 98, 504, 523, besides faderes 383. The gen. sg. mōder occurs 155. The pl. of brōper is brēpren 42, 57, 59 ...

(vi) n-stems.

These have e in the nom., dat., acc. sg. The gen. does not occur. The pl. ends in -(e)n: aldren 13; sterren 50, 476; fēn 74; assen, 114, 344 ...; mōwen 357. The n has been dropped for the sake of the rhyme in cye 267 (or is it sg.?).

A gen. pl. in -ene occurs once: prūdene 508. L̄quedis 153 is the only instance of an s plural.

(vii) Other consonant stems.

Nizt is generally unaltered in the dat. sg: 320, 322 ..., but nizte occurs once, l. 254. Plurals: children 395; men 5. The dat. pl. of fōt occurs as fīt 46, 58; the forms fōte 50, 455 and fōt 48, 67 are presumably dat. sg.

§ 10. Adjectives.

(i) STRONG.

Adjectives which in OE. end in a consonant take no ending in the nom. sg.: heiz 19; dēp 95; feir 125; etc.

The dat. sg. ends in e: q̄ne 2, 4, 80, 127 ...; rēu(p)fule 30, 418; nq̄ne 38; gōde 85; lq̄nge 127; guldene 412; etc. Exceptions are heiz 125; muchel 250, 381 (besides muchele 232); ōper 532.

The acc. sg. generally has e: faire 5; grēte 115; q̄ne gōde 128; guldene 401; etc. Acc. forms without e are less numerous; the instances are gōd 192; richest 207; nq̄n 239, 334, 380; such 328; al 449, 511; inōuz 452. It is noteworthy that most of these acc. forms without e are accompanied by nouns which in OE. were neuter.

Adjectives which in OE. ended in -ig take no e either in the dat. or acc. Instances are: Dat. sq̄ri 107; mani 155; pēstri 243; etc. Acc. meri 5; sq̄ri 239; muri 255; etc.

An archaic acc. is nq̄nne 235.

In the plural all cases end in e: gōde 1; alle 32; 45, 61; heie 146; prōute 146; etc. The only exceptions are lq̄ng 146 (it follows and is separated from its noun and moreover stands in the rhyme); ōper 286.

The only instance of an OE. adj. in -ig taking the e is manie 181. When used predicatively the adjectives appear in the pl. both with and without e: fulle 17; wīse 123; wōd 15; wīs 129. At the end of the line the e is added or dropped to suit the rhyme.

(ii) WEAK.

All cases of both numbers end in e: sg. ēlde 31, 169, 335; ʒunge 34, 332; etc.; pl. fulle, 74; ʒunge 392; etc. Adjectives which in OE. ended in -ig drop the e: sōri 457. In the case of his smal chaf 330, we should probably read smāle.

§ 11. Pronouns.

(i) PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

First person.

Sg. Nom. ich (written in the MS. i^e) 21, 22 ... It is joined to the verb in nellic 3; telli 49; nabbi 309; nellich (not -i^e) 463; haddich 477; seidich 485.

Dat. Acc. mē.

Pl. Nom. wē.

Dat. Acc. vs.

Second person.

Sg. Nom. þou 42 ...; þū 82 ... After t: tou 38, 459.

Dat. him.

Acc. him 36 ...; hinc 61, 137, 242, 465.

Sg. Fem. Nom. hēo 196, 216, 217 ... Cp. also nadda
334, 'she had not'.

Dat. hire 196.

Neut. Nom. Acc. hit.

Pl. Nom. hī 14, 17 ... (fifty-six instances); pei (five times) 15, 46, 115, 262, 455.

Dat. Acc. hem 6, 33, 44 ... Cp. brouztem (= brouzte hem) 368; grettem 91.

(ii) INDEFINITE PRONOUN.

me 'one' occurs 36, 270, 304, 327.

(iii) POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

First person singular.

Sg. Nom. mī 37, 42, 51 ...

Dat. mī 48, 178, 302 ...; mīne 40, 205.

Pl. mī 46, 309; mīne 42.

mī is used both in sg. and pl. when the possessive stands in the thesis, and mīne when in the arsis. See § 13.

First person plural.

ōure 11, 13 ..., vre 72, 384.

Second person singular.

Sg. Nom. ḡī 52, 54 ...; ḡīn 217, 319.

Dat. Acc. ḡī 208, 298 ...; ḡīne 211, 299; ḡīn 267, 319.

Pl. Nom. Dat. Acc. ḡīne 57, 58, 70, 71.

Second person plural.

ḡōure 45 ...

Third person singular.

Masc. his 4 ... Once in the pl. hise 86.

Fem. hire 176 ... With the e elided before a vowel, hir 195.

Third person plural.

here 14 ...

(iv) DEFINITE ARTICLE.

The regular form is þe 7 ..., which after t becomes te 48. Cp. also atte 94, 104, 111, 117, and tērnðe 87. It appears coalesced with the following word in þēnes (= þe ēnes) 402 and tērnðe 87. Traces of the old inflexions occur in þane (acc. sg.) 436; þene 301, 425; þen (acc.) 298, 302; to þe nāle (= þen āle dat.) 6; to þe nēndinge 29; atte nēnde 327.

þat has the force of the definite article (= the) in þat child 66, 67, 77, 79, 102, 135; þat ē brōþer 94, 103; þat gamen 108; þat fē 135.

(v) DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUN.

þis. The regular form is þis for all cases of both sg. and plur. Instances of the plural are 63, 105, 121 ... After t it becomes tis 20. In the dat. sg. we also have þisse 197, 293, 294; þissen 341. By the side of the regular plural form þis the form þēse occurs five times 218, 337, 374, 409, 417.

§ 12. Age and dialect.

The MS. seems to have been written soon after the middle of the thirteenth century; it cannot be earlier, as the spellings o for OE. u and ou for OE. ū show. Cp. Napier, Holy Rood-Tree, F.F.T.S. p.85, and Morsbach, § 121.

The composition of the poem may be assigned to the same period.

The dialect is that of the South-west. The verbal endings prove its Southern origin; the pres. indic. pl. in -eþ (-þ); retention of the i in hatie 60, etc.; the ending of the pres. partic. in -inde.

The initial v for f in vader 39, etc., also shows that it was written in the South. That its home was the South-west and not South-east is proved by the treatment of OE. ȝ; cp. § 5 (7) and (12). Cp. also note to sungen, 486.

§ 13. Metre.

The metre of Iacob and Iosep consists of a mixture of Septenaries and Alexandrines, a metrical form characteristic of the thirteenth century and found in the Passion of our Lord, The Woman of Samaria, etc.¹ The Septenary has seven arses or stresses with a caesura after the fourth. The Alexandrine has six arses with the caesura after the third. In Iacob and Iosep the Alexandrines predominate considerably.

The first half of the Septenary ends in an arsis (cp. 5 while men lóueden méri sóng, gámen and féire tále).

The second half of the Septenary ends in a thesis, the preceding syllable being long (5 gámen and féire tále), more rarely in an arsis (20 múchel ne óuerstéiz).

The first half line of the Alexandrine ends in a thesis preceded by a long syllable (1 Wölle 3e nou ihére). The few exceptions where it apparently ends in an arsis, such as 26 sónes hé wan tén, can, as Heuser pointed out, be made correct by a slight emendation: sónes hé wan tén[e]. The second half of the Alexandrine can end in a thesis, as in 1 wórdes swíþe góde, or in an arsis as in 31 Iácob þe élde mán.

¹ I adopt Schipper's view. Some scholars (Heuser, Kaluza) regard these poems as composed in Septenaries only, assuming that any unaccented syllable when followed by another unaccented syllable or standing in a pause (caesura or end of verse) can receive a secondary accent and form an arsis, e. g. 202 Iósep cáme to bóurè; 204 'Iósep', quód þe quénè.

In the case of both metres the thesis can be disyllabic, as in 5 whíle men lóueden méri sǫng, or can be wanting, e.g. 15 þei wéren rízt wód; 40 of mínc mélinge; 46 7 tó mi fét fálle.

In at least three instances the line seems overloaded:

81 Ac lutel er hi weren in Sichem bi hem ich stod þo.

314 Ac þou ssalt habbe raper seue 3er blisse of alle gode.

512. 7 seggeþ þat Iosep is in Egipte ase heiz as a king.

And it is possible that some emendation is required. Heuser would omit lutel 81, raper 314, 7 seggeþ 512 (emending þing to tíþing in the previous line). But such changes are not certain.

RHYME.

(1) Normal close \bar{e} (WS. $\bar{æ}$, Angl. \bar{e} , from WG. \bar{a}) rhymes with close \bar{e} from OE. \bar{e} : wēre: hēre (OE. hēr) 41; wēþeþ (OE. wēþeþ): forlēteþ 137; swēte (OE. swēte): lēte 535. But it also rhymes with open \bar{e} , from OE. $\bar{æ}$ (WG. ai) and OE. $\bar{e}a$: l̥ēde (WG. ai): arēde 119; l̥ēde (WG. ai): rēde 183; sl̥ēpe: m̥ēte (WG. ai) 254; biwēued: h̥ēued (OE. $\bar{e}a$) 425; l̥ēdeþ (WG. ai): grēdeþ 465; biwēued: bir̥ēued (OE. $\bar{e}a$) 517.

(2) Close \bar{o} rhymes with open \bar{o} : wōt: fōt 47; rōpe: wōpe 127; blōdi: s̥ōri 171.

(3) Short vowels sometimes rhyme with long ones: wīs is 129; is : grīs 113, 208; perōn : agōn 318; ōn : *măn*¹ 131; etc.

(4) Assonances are not infrequent: wēmbe : lōnge 7; sōne : cōme 53, 65, 155, 159; ēk : fēt 57; hine : binime 61; sprōng : lōnd 157; blōdi : sōri 171; liue : blīpe 177, 212, 348 ...; wēpep : fōrlētep 137; slēpe : mēte 254; hēm : mōn 330, 431; hēm : igōn 346; icōme : lōue 378; *azein*² : drēm 417; anōn : hēm 429. Cp. also bringe : fingres 390.

(5) Assonances also occur where the vowels differ in length: līf : wīp 195; hēm : *măn*¹ 31.

(6) The rhyme wēpe : wīpe 489 is inexact.

Explicit Iacob 7 Iosep¹.

¹ After Iosep an h has been erased.

NOTES

6. to þe nale for to þen ale, 'to the ale or ale-house'. The þen is dative: OE. þæm. Cp. 29 þe nendinge; 327 atte nende. Cp. also Chaucer, Freres Tale 51 And make him grete festes atte nale.

7. ucchen, 'to increase, enlarge, distend': OWS. īecan, LWS. ȳcan.

10. Bote we hit bileuen, 'unless we give it up'.

12. ligge slepe, 'to lie sleeping'. Slepe is infinitive. Cp. Cursor Mundi 14172, He lijs to dei, 'He lies dying'.

such hit were a gris, 'as though it were a pig'. Cp. 371 such hit were a king, 382 such hit were his gome, 521 such hit were a child.

18. riued, adv. 'in great numbers'. It is formed, with irregular ending, from rīve, obsolete form of rife.

pullle. Pull, 'a pool'. This word occurs in the OE. charters as pull, the form here, and pyll, whence apparently the sixteenth century pill.

29. þe nendinge = þen endinge. Cp. note to l. 6.

31. þe elde man. Cp. 169, 335 and Havelok 546 an eld cloth, 2472 þe helde men. For further instances of eld, 'old', cp. the β forms in N.E.D. s.v. old.

43. 'And as we reaped our corn.' I take so here in the sense of 'as, whilst, when'. The N.E.D. records no ME. instance of so with temporal meaning, but as it is used in this sense in OE. (e.g. Genesis 552, Psalms ed. Thorpe 113³) there seems to be no objection to assigning this meaning to it here.

62. binime, properly 'to take away'. Here it seems to mean 'to prevent'.

77. woder, 'whither'. The o (= u) is due to the influence of the w. Cp. § 5, 13.

92. al an oþer, adv. 'altogether differently'. Cp. Havelok 1395 But auelok þouthe al an oþer, and N.E.D. s.v. another adv.

94. frome, properly 'beginning'. It is here practically meaningless and added for the sake of the rhyme. Cp. 111, 117.

98. beþ, we should no doubt alter to bip, as beþ otherwise only occurs in the pl.

100. fotsid, 'reaching down to the feet'. OE. fōtsīd. Cp. Napier, Contributions to OE. Lexicography, 1906, s.vv. fōtsīd and lendensīd, 'reaching to the loins'. The only instance in the N.E.D. is from Douglas, Æneis VII, xi. 31 Gyrd in a garmont semely and futsyd.

106. hete means probably not 'heat', but 'hatred, strife'. Cp note to 316.

110. A wey, 'Alas'.

114. of fer 7 of gris. Cp. 208. The regular ME. form of fer is veir, 'a kind of fur'. OE. initial f had become v in the dialect of this poem, though generally written f, so that fer could stand for either fer or ver. The phrase veir and gris is common in ME. (cp. Sir Tristrem 1381, Mannyng's Chronicle 615, Cursor Mundi 25466; etc.) and is from the O. French vair et gris.

116. Egypte is gen. pl., OE. Egypta, 'of the Egyptians'. In l. 143 we get the weak gen. Egiptene.

118. come. May not the original have had comeþ and a later copyist have altered to come for the sake of the rhyme? Cp. § 8.

133. panes, 'pence', is from the form panig, which appears in the twelfth century by the side of the regular penig.

135. Is the form fengeþ miswritten for fongeþ?

136. Darf no man axe, 'No one need ask'. Darf = þarf. Forms with initial d for þ occur elsewhere in the case of this verb: in Moral Ode 43 two MSS. read darf, whilst the remaining five have initial þ; in King Horn 388 MS. C has dorte for þorte. Cp. also N.E.D. s.v. þarf.

143. Egiptene, gen. pl. Cp. note to 116.

164-5. The poet is evidently thinking of only one of the two chapmen.

177. a liue, 'in my life, all my life'.

178. be is 1st person pres. indic. with future meaning, 'I shall never be blithe'. Cp. 349, 462. Cp. also Lazamon 28218 ne beo ich nauere bliðe.

199. After this line a line has been lost, as the rhyme shows.

203. 'What may your will be?'

215. The original probably had werned with inexact rhyme :
cp. 390-1 bringe : vingres.

233. þeið he ne hadde grome. For ne hadde one would expect hadde (þeið he hadde grome). For the use of OE. þēah, ME. þeið = 'if, even if' in sentences beginning with 'It is no wonder', cp. Koch, Historische Gramm. der engl. Sprache (ed. Zupitza), ii. 459, and N.E.D. s.v. though, II, 4.

264. arouzt. One would expect arauzt from OE. areaht. It is probably merely a scribal error.

267. holen out, 'hollow out, pick out'. It is infin. governed by ssulen, to be supplied from the preceding ssalt.

278. rihtwis refers to Louerd.

284. Cp. § 5, 12.

291. vrles. Cp. § 5, 4.

293. aiwiȝt, 'at all, in any way'. It stands for aniwiȝt, the ai being the contraction for ani found in the South in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

303. 7 quite faten of bende. Faren was apparently first written and then altered by the scribe to faten. What this means I do not know and prefer to read 7 quite of bende, 'and release from his bonds'.

316. hunger 7 hete. This phrase occurs elsewhere; it is frequent in Laȝamon (4042 &c.), and I take hete to mean 'hatred, enmity', rather than 'heat'. Cp. Madden's note in his Laȝamon, iii, p. 464. It also occurs in St. Katherine 2401. In this phrase hete has of course lost its original meaning, and the whole implies 'want and trouble.'

317. Read drinke. The n may have been added, for metrical reasons, before the following vowel.

324. After this line a leaf has been cut out.

330. Ofte of þis smal chaf þis breþren brouȝten hom. This I take it is a reference to the chaff story mentioned on p. xii, which was probably told on the lost leaf.

334. nadda = nadde heo, 'she had not'.

327. atte nende = atten ende. Cp. note to l. 6.

360. arugge, 'on (his) back'. OE. on hrycge.

363. tubrugge. The OE. form, which is not recorded, would be tygebrycg.

364. For the þarle of the MS. we must obviously read þar þe.

369. let for lete (pret. subj.) for the sake of the rhyme.

381. For muchel one nede, 'for a great need'. For the position of the article cp. 'many (such) a need'.

384. heizte, 'is called'.

391. halde, 'poured': OWS. hieldan, Angl. hældan. Cp. Lazamon 1196 He halde þa milc in þat fur, 14995 þat atter heo halde in þat win. Cp. also N.E.D. s.v. hield.

401. was Pharaones þe king. When two possessive genitives stand in apposition, the second has in ME. no inflexion. The two genitives are generally separated by the governing substantive as in l. 416 Of Faraones lond þe king. This construction is very common in ME., e.g. Chaucer, Book of the Duchess 282 The kinges meting Pharaow, 'the dream of king Pharaow'.

402. wipinne þe þrene. Can a wooden skewer be here meant with which the sack was fastened? The meaning would be that the cup was put at the top of the sack, just under the fastening.

403. come. The þl. form instead of the correct cam owing to the following þis þunge men.

407. twolf. Cp. 532 twolue and § 5, 13.

410-12. Note that these three lines rhyme.

416. Cp. 401.

418. drem, 'loud lamentation'. Cp. Beues of Hamtoun, ed. Kölbing, 1339 Saber wep and made drem.

434. For instances of no = 'nor' cp. N.E.D. s.v. no, conj.

455. MS. hise ten breþren. This cannot be right. Read þis ten breþren or hise ten sones (?)

464. awreke, properly 'to avenge'. Can it be here 'make good my loss, comfort'?

486. sungen, OE. syngian, 'to sin'. Cp. Ekwall, ESL. 40, 161 ff. According to Ekwall 'the g forms in this and similar cases only occur in writings which belong to the middle or western portions of the south, or the southern part of the west midland area.'

487. þoure neuer on, 'never one of you'.

497. oure kun alle 7 oure nextfolde, 'all our kin and our most intimate friends'. Nextfolde here used as sb. It is properly an adj., cp. Juliana p. 32, Al mi nestfalde cun. Cp. OE. nēah- feald, 'intimate' (not in the dictionaries) as in to his nēah-fealdum frēondum, and nēahfealdlic (Napier, Contributions to OE. Lexicography, p. 47).

502. gop, 'go on foot, walk'.

517. benetene, so MS. I have left it in the text, but it is clearly miswritten for beuerene, 'made of beaver skin, for the confusion of t and r is common in MSS. of this period. The only two instances of beveren in the N.E.D. mean 'beaver coloured', but there is no reason why it should not be used in the sense of 'made of beaver skin'. Cp. Chaucer, Prol. 272 Upon his heed a Flaundrish bever hat'.

522. wild for wilde on account of the rhyme.

523. come, 'coming'. The o of course = u and is due to the influence of the verb; OE. cyme would have yielded ME. cime.
